INTRODUCTION

THE incidents related in this pamphlet are only a few of those connected with the history of the Theosophical Movement; only the fringe of the subject has been touched; yet we feel they will serve to make clear something of the real purpose of this Movement, and of the basis and motives underlying the many attacks that have been made upon it, and thus remove some of the misconceptions that have arisen in the minds of the public. In the limited space of a pamphlet many matters of vital interest and importance must perforce be omitted, a full account of which will be given later by Katherine Tingley in her book The Conspiracy Against the Theosophical Society and its Leaders, which she has in preparation and which will contain many startling revelations of the persecution which Theosophy and its Leaders have endured from many unsuspected sources.

Yet even herein is shown the truth of the old saying that a lie two hours ahead of the truth is hardly to be overtaken. Jesus is said to have declared, "I came not to bring peace upon the earth but a sword," and the same is true in degree of every presentation of Truth pure and undefiled; yet his mission was peace, good will to men; and so too the mission of Theosophy is peace, universal brotherhood.

Every new effort for the benefit of Humanity has its enemies, not only those who are wilfully so, because they feel their selfish interests are threatened, and who take a positive delight in circulating false stories, but also the misinformed and the ignorant. For these latter, there is indeed hope that with knowledge, with the spread of correct information, their attitude may change to one of tolerance, if not of acceptance. But where in the scheme of evolution shall we place the former? Then too, religious prejudices, resulting in persecution, can be met in the open field; but gossips and scandal-mongers, and purveyors of anonymous and false accusations — what condemnation is too strong for such? In human shape they may truly be; but partaking of human nature, at the core of which is the divine spark? Would it not be a libel on humanity so to label them? And what shall be said of those who know of and permit these things, while at the same time claiming an inner knowledge of the truth, clairvoyant powers and an insight into human nature? Shall they escape the divine Justice of Karma?

Theosophy teaches Brotherhood; Universal Brotherhood is the first object of the Theosophical Movement. But what is Brotherhood? Is it Brotherhood to close your eyes to the dangers that threaten your fellows? Is it Brotherhood to permit a degenerate or a moral leper to enter the sanctity of your home, to associate freely with your innocent children and to exercise unrestrained his evil influence over them and possibly to ruin them? Is it Brotherhood to permit one suffering from a contagious loathsome disease to sit down and drink out of the same cup with you, and to mingle with the members of your family? No, true Brotherhood is not mawkish and foolish sentimentality. Brotherhood, from a Theosophical standpoint, which is consistent with the highest common sense, means and includes justice, it means brotherhood and justice to the children, the innocent, the weak and the ignorant. It means responsibility on the part of those who know for those who do not know. A true brother is not afraid to remind another of his mistake for fear of arousing harsh feeling, but warns both him and others lest he do harm.

In the grand scheme of evolution we are all here for a purpose, and to accomplish that purpose requires that we cultivate only that part of our nature that will endure, the immortal, divine part; it requires that we follow only those things that purify and uplift, that make us better men and women, better home-makers in the most sacred sense, better citizens.

Katherine Tingley teaches that any one who professes to work for Theosophy or defend the Theosophical teachings and movement, who attempts to convey to others the idea that he is cultivating spiritual powers or living the spiritual life, but who neglects his sacred obligations to his family or any of his duties, is wilfully and wofully going contrary to the teachings of Theosophy. Katherine Tingley declares that it will require the most strenuous efforts during this and the next generation to undo fully the evils resulting from the promulgation of counterfeit Theosophy.

We as students of Theosophy, the Divine Wisdom, believe in the widest tolerance, but we have a duty to perform and, as H. P. Blavatsky has said, "The duty of a Theosophist is to do his duty by every duty," to protest against evil in every form and wherever found, and not merely to protest, but to protest along corrective lines. Surely this must have been in the mind of Jesus when he drove the money-changers out of the Temple. Is the Galilean teacher to be blamed for rebuking and refusing to be a party to those who would impose upon the people with their pretense to possess the divine wisdom? Yet I doubt not, in his day were to be found those who exclaimed, "How unbrotherly!" And none the less important is the duty of Theosophists to protect the temple of Truth and protest against anything that may lead away from the clean, honorable path in life.

There are many, very many, in the world today who seek to have their conscience lulled to sleep, to be cajoled into the belief that both God and Mammon can be served at the same time, that there is still a way in which they can gratify the demands of their lower nature and yet keep up at least the pretense of being students of the higher wisdom. But it is deeds, not words, that the world needs with its poor suffering humanity; not the prophesying of smooth things, the speaking of comfortable words, the prophesying of deceptions — but the plain and simple truth, the protest against evil, the helpful words that encourage and inspire to a renewed effort.

And therefore it is that these Incidents are related.

FROM THE SAN DIEGO 'UNION,' APRIL 5, 1910

J. H. FUSSELL lectured at the Isis Theater on Sunday night under the auspices of the Aryan Theosophical Society, giving 'Some Incidents in the History of the Theosophical Movement.' Mr. Fussell lectured for an hour and thirty minutes, but so intensely interesting were the incidents he related, many of them dramatic in their situations, that he held his large audience from start to finish.

He spoke of the conditions existing in the world when Madame H. P. Blavatsky first came in 1875 to New York to found there the Theosophical Society; of the message she had to materialists, spiritualists, church-goers, scientists, and of the friends and enemies she made out of these bodies. Of special interest were several statements written by Madame Blavatsky to and of her faithful colleague and successor, William Q. Judge, and particularly a sketch of the history of the Esoteric Section, which Mr. Fussell gave by permission of Mme Tingley, who is the present Head of the reorganized Theosophical body. The interest of the audience was marked when the lecturer read the pledge or obligation which is exacted of all members of this inner body.

A description of many of the attacks upon the Theosophical Society and its Leaders and of the growth and progress of the Society was full of interesting historical information.

In introducing his subject Mr. Fussell said:

“This that I am going to read to you tonight was being prepared as a pamphlet for the information of our new members and inquirers as a brief account of certain facts of the true history of the Theosophical Movement. At the request, however, of a citizen of San Diego who is conversant with some of the facts herein told and who suggested that on account of San Diego’s having been the theater of so many incidents connected with the Theosophical Movement, our friends who attend our Sunday evening meetings at Isis Theater would be interested in these facts, I have selected a certain portion of the pamphlet to read to you this evening.

“And in writing this it has been my endeavor to present the facts so clearly and faithfully that those earnestly seeking the truth may know where to look for it, and not be misled by any who misuse the name of Theosophy.”

INCIDENTS IN THE HISTORY OF THE THEOSOPHICAL MOVEMENT

NO one familiar with the world of thought as it is today, and able to look back thirty, forty or more years, but is amazed at the enormous changes that have taken place. The younger generation of today can have little conception of the condition of things that confronted their forefathers or of the discoveries in new realms of thought and research and invention that have changed the whole face of the world, and are so common today.

In thinking of Madame Blavatsky and how to present to you a picture of her work there comes to my mind as an illustration a great scientist, far ahead of his time, making a great discovery — something that would benefit all his fellow-men — which, if it could be applied, would remove the sorrow and heartache of the world, and lift the burdens from the sad and weary. Moved by the knowledge of this great discovery, would he not seek every means to bring it to the attention of the public? So it was with Madame Blavatsky and her knowledge of the truths of Theosophy. Energized by these, and by her great love for humanity, she sought to give some of these teachings to the world, so that a new order of things might come to be.

From her writings, and from the testimony of those who knew her, the evidences are plain to everyone who will choose to look; that she had not only a great store of knowledge, but a great insight into the needs of the world. Her keen powers of perception are acknowledged even by her worst enemies, and those who have any appreciation of her motives and efforts can value to some degree the vast extent of her knowledge.

H. P. BLAVATSKY'S MESSAGE TO MATERIALISTS, SPIRITUALISTS, CHURCH-GOERS, AND SCIENTISTS — FRIENDS AND ENEMIES

At the time she came to America with the purpose of forming the Theosophical Society, materialism was at its strongest, and in its ranks she saw a tremendous power. Many of the followers of materialism showed an honesty and sincerity of purpose that in many believers in things spiritual were sadly missing. Most of the materialists had come out of the Churches, unable to accept their teachings on faith, and finding little in the actual practice of Christianity that would warrant accepting the lives of its adherents as proof of the truth of their beliefs. As an example of one of these honest doubters, but a man who according to his knowledge sought to uplift his fellows, we may mention Robert Ingersoll; and while we cannot agree with his position in every particular, yet it must be conceded that he was a man who had the courage of his convictions, even though by following them he should cut himself off from all hopes of a future life. And there were many like him; while others, bereft of hope, were sinking down into despair because they had found nothing in their association with the Churches that would develop the spiritual side of their natures, and not knowing where to turn, were going to the other extreme, ignoring the soul—that which directs life—and depending entirely upon the reasoning of the brain-mind as the only way whereby man might learn the truth.

Those who have studied Theosophy know that Madame Blavatsky came with a great message for all of these, and in spite of her criticism of the materialistic standpoint, she recognised in the sincere followers of that system an earnestness and a desire for better things that called out her warmest sympathy and her strongest efforts to open their eyes to the deeper truths of the inner world that lies behind and beneath the material.

However, she realized that her time was limited. She had so much to give out, it was her mission not simply to touch one phase of the thought of the world, but to strike a chord that should find an echo in the hearts of all. To throw her whole efforts in one direction would have been to defeat her great mission of presenting the all-comprehending truths of Theosophy which are for all classes — all phases of thought.

Turning now to what in a sense is the opposite extreme from materialism, there are and were in the spiritualist ranks hundreds of honest men and women, many of whom had also drifted away from the churches because their teachings could not satisfy them, and had chosen another path. Madame Blavatsky had a message for these also; and just as in the case of the followers of materialism she sought to quicken them to recognise the truths of the inner spiritual world, so in the case of the spiritualists she called attention to the same spiritual world, and warned them that that which they were investigating was but another world of finer matter just beyond the confines of this, and that the soul when it leaves the body does not return until the time comes for its next re-birth into earth-life, when it takes up a new body. It has been held by some that because Madame Blavatsky investigated Spiritualism, therefore she indorsed it; but such is very far from the truth, as every student of her writings knows. In Theosophy is to be found an explanation of the phenomena of Spiritualism, and once that explanation is understood no one who is seeking the path of true spiritual enlightenment will continue to investigate along such lines. There are many earnest and honest people among the followers of Spiritualism, but there are some of whom, unfortunately, this cannot be said. It was part of the mission of Madame Blavatsky to point out the dangers that are to be met with in following this line of research, and that true spiritual knowledge does not lie in this direction.

We have said that both in the ranks of materialism and spiritualism there were many seeking the truth, and naturally, as the world is today, there were also many seeking prominence, desiring leadership, aggressive against anything that might be contrary to their preconceived ideas. Hence it is that out of the ranks of these two movements Madame Blavatsky found many antagonists; but also many friends; some who, leaving materialism or spiritualism behind, found in Theosophy that which they had vainly sought along one or other of these two opposing lines of thought.

Then too, Madame Blavatsky had a message to the great body of church-goers which in a sense lies between the extremes of materialism and spiritualism, and so many of whom are kept in apathy, content merely with sophistry, that by their belief and by following certain prescribed forms their souls will be saved. Not so, however, with all; many, while still remaining within the fold, were searching eagerly for the truth, and they gladly welcomed Theosophy, which revealed to them the real meaning of the nature and mission of Jesus upon earth.

But out of the ranks of church-goers have also arisen many of the bitterest antagonists that Theosophy and especially its Leaders, Madame Blavatsky and her successors, have met with. I shall have something to say of these later. We do know, however, that intolerance exists even at the beginning of this Twentieth Century as it existed forty years ago when Madame Blavatsky came to this country. It was as though the persecutors of the truth were alarmed lest it should prevail and cause them to lose their privileges and fancied rights. What a picture of slavery to error is presented by this antagonism against a messenger of truth!

Another class we must refer to, for out of it too both friends and enemies have arisen. I speak of the great body of Scientists, which includes some of the greatest lovers of truth, willing to sacrifice anything in its search, yet dogmatic, jealous of anything that arises from outside their ranks or threatens to overturn one of their pet theories. Every year however is revealing more of the light that Theosophy has shed upon the world of science; every year new corroborations are being made of the truth of Madame Blavatsky's statements. Every year the wisdom of the ancients is receiving fresh vindication, and modern science is approximating more and more to the knowledge of forgotten times.

This was the condition of things in which Madame Blavatsky found herself during the first years of the Theosophical Society. The pressure of antagonism was heavy against her everywhere, and not only were individual representatives, and in a sense the bodies as a whole (materialistic and spiritualistic and church bodies), doing their utmost to silence her message, but many newspapers (some doubtless catering to the prejudices of their readers, and others mirroring the personal views of their editors — for only a few are truly independent of influences from these quarters) did their share in the unbrotherly work, and by attempted satire and ridicule sought to drive Madame Blavatsky from the field.

The casual reader knows nothing of the almost overwhelming effort that was made against her from all quarters as if by concerted action. The psychological influence of the wave of persecution spread far and wide; yet Madame Blavatsky never faltered, never stopped pouring forth her volleys of truth — her shot and shell from the arsenal of the ancient wisdom.

H. P. BLAVATSKY'S WORK IN INDIA. TEMPORARY HEADQUARTERS AT ADYAR.
COULOMB PLOT EXPOSED. PSYCHICAL RESEARCH SOCIETY'S REPORT
BASED ON STATEMENTS OF SELF-CONFESSED FORGERS AND PERJURERS.

After Madame Blavatsky had formed in the U. S. A. the Society which, as said, attracted many from different ranks of thought, she went to India and there created wide-spread interest among the most progressive minds, both English and native; and here again she found both friends and antagonists. The light from her torch was too brilliant and the power of her work too great for the missionaries. It threatened their influence, their livelihood, and so (probably under the advice of colleagues in America and Europe) they busied themselves in decrying her and in seeking to make her appear as a charlatan and a fraud.

This was in 1884. Madame Blavatsky had established her temporary Headquarters at Adyar, Madras (India) — which were paid for and built up very largely by American money, many of the donors and subscribers to the establishment of these Headquarters for India being American members who later supported William Q. Judge against the attacks made upon him by Mrs. Besant, Col. Olcott, and their associates, and who at that time took no pains to hold or make any claim upon the temporary Indian Headquarters which they had so largely helped to build up, but which are not now regarded by the true followers of H. P. Blavatsky and W. Q. Judge as a center for the advancement of Theosophy in the real sense of the word.

When Madame Blavatsky left India she established her Headquarters at London, where she remained until her death.

The greatest scandal that was ever associated with the name of Madame Blavatsky came from the efforts of two poor homeless and destitute French people — M. Coulomb and his wife. Appealing to Madame Blavatsky in Bombay for food and shelter, she not only supplied their immediate necessities, but gave them employment in the Indian Theosophical Headquarters as caretakers, only to be met very soon by base ingratitude and scheming on the part of these two adventurers.

Madame Blavatsky leaving the Headquarters to return to Europe, this man and his wife were placed in charge of the building in her absence. It is not necessary here to tell the whole story — how the man, a clever carpenter, cut a hole in the wall between two rooms, made sliding doors and panels with the attempt to show that Madame Blavatsky had used trickery to impose upon the public. That this was a plot, pure and simple, does not require further explanation than to state the following facts: a short time previously, the woman, Mme. Coulomb, had been discovered in the attempt to extort money from some members of the Theosophical Society. In one instance she succeeded in obtaining a small amount, but Madame Blavatsky hearing of it and immediately putting a stop to these efforts of Mme. Coulomb, the latter, in the hearing of reliable witnesses, swore that she would have revenge.

It was afterwards learned and published in the Madras Daily Mail that the missionaries of the Madras Christian College had offered to pay Mme. Coulomb a thousand rupees to procure certain of Madame Blavatsky's letters. Both M. and Mme. Coulomb later, when their actions were exposed, confessed to this plot; the letters which Mme. Coulomb turned over to the missionaries were proved to be forgeries; the sliding doors and panels made by M. Coulomb were such that they would not work except under the heavy blows of a mallet; and the false testimony of these two people was met and refuted by a large number of reliable and responsible witnesses.

This was the state of things when a young and beardless youth, just out of college, arrived on the scene as the agent of a society then recently founded in England, which was anxious to make some investigations that would attach importance to its proceedings. This young man was Mr. Richard Hodgson, agent of the Psychical Research Society. He arrived at the Indian Headquarters a few days after William Q. Judge, the latter having been sent by Madame Blavatsky as her agent to investigate the plot.

When Mr. Hodgson arrived the hole in the wall had been closed up, the sliding doors and panels removed, and there was no trace of them whatever left for him to see; yet he gives a drawing of these, which in his report, afterwards adopted by the Psychological Research Society and published in its proceedings, he claims to have made "from measurements of my own." This sketch, however, is a duplication of one made by William Q. Judge and pirated by this young man.

This is the ground-work upon which the Psychological Research Society based its calumnious report on the character and work of Madame Blavatsky. It is not difficult to see how the intolerant appetite of her persecuting enemies was fed by these false statements, nor is it surprising that the sensational papers all over the world published the alleged exposé of the Theosophical Society. But so far as I know there were no papers in this country interested enough to seek for Madame Blavatsky's answer to these accusations or to publish what her friends had to say in her vindication; and so it is that even today every now and then one hears an echo of this Psychological Research Society Report (which so far as I know still exists upon their books), though as shown again and again it is absolutely worthless, based upon the false statements of self-confessed forgers and ingrates and upon the word of a young man who does not scruple to claim the drawing of another as his own.

DR. ELLIOT COUES ATTACKS W. Q. JUDGE. HIS LIES NAILED. EXPELLED FROM SOCIETY. NEW YORK 'SUN' PUBLISHES LIBEL AGAINST H. P. BLAVATSKY — LATER PUBLISHES HONORABLE RETRACTION

I have already spoken of the general attitude of the scientists, and out of their ranks was found one of the bitterest enemies of the Theosophical Movement — at first posing as a friend and possibly for a time sincere in his adherence to the Theosophical teachings — a man of intellect and ability, but with the lurking seeds of ambition in his nature and a desire to lead.

When Madame Blavatsky left this country for India, there remained in charge of the work William Q. Judge, and as Madame Blavatsky herself said when writing to the American members in 1888, it was to him alone that was due the preservation of Theosophy in America.

The man to whom I now wish to refer, Dr. Elliot Coues by name, was a well-known scientist in Washington, D. C. Desirous of power and supreme authority in the Theosophical Society in the United States, he wrote to Madame Blavatsky, first suggesting that she place him in authority and depose William Q. Judge from his position, then accusing William Q. Judge and threatening that unless he were placed in authority he would ruin the Society. Any one who knows Madame Blavatsky knows that she was never to be swerved from the path of justice, nor to be moved by threat, nor would she desert a faithful pupil and colleague such as William Q. Judge ever proved himself to be; and because of the un-theosophical attitude, contrary to the principles of Theosophy, on the part of Dr. Coues, she summarily expelled him from the ranks. Seeking to carry out his threat and destroy the Theosophical Movement, this man gave false, libelous information to the New York Sun, defaming the character of Madame Blavatsky. This was published, and immediately libel proceedings were commenced by William Q. Judge on behalf of Madame Blavatsky against this paper, the New York Sun. While the libel suit was still pending, not having yet come to trial, Madame Blavatsky died, which technically annulled all proceedings, leaving the paper free and Madame Blavatsky's memory to that extent unvindicated.

The following is one of the most interesting of the incidents in the history of the Theosophical Movement. Shortly after Madame Blavatsky's death the editor of the New York Sun, Mr. Dana, took advantage of an opportunity that was offered him of learning some of the facts regarding Madame Blavatsky and her character and work, and in accordance with his high principles, and the high standard of honor for which he has always been noted, voluntarily published the following editorial in the New York Sun of September 26th, 1892:

We print on another page an article in which Mr. William Q. Judge deals with the romantic and extraordinary career of the late Madame Helena P. Blavatsky, the Theosophist. We take occasion to observe that on July 20th, 1890, we were misled into admitting to the Sun's columns an article by Dr. E. F. Coues of Washington, in which allegations were made against Madame Blavatsky's character, and also against her followers, which appear to have been without solid foundation. Mr. Judge's article disposes of all questions relating to Madame Blavatsky as presented by Dr. Coues, and we desire to say that his allegations respecting the Theosophical Society and Mr. Judge personally are not sustained by evidence and should not have been printed.

As before with other attacks, many papers had published references to Dr. Coues and the bitter attack against Madame Blavatsky in the New York Sun, but I do not know that any published the Sun's editorial retraction, or even made reference to it. It would appear that they had interest only in what might tend to the defamation of Madame Blavatsky, but not in the correction of the false report and the vindication of her character, and so it was that the adverse comments that were made generally throughout the country, to some extent even now still remain in the minds of those who may have read them.

Outside of Madame Blavatsky's students, and the students of her successors, William Q. Judge and Katherine Tingley — those who are giving their energy and time to the furtherance of the Theosophical Cause — there are few who realize the magnitude of Madame Blavatsky's work. Her writings alone are colossal in the extent of mental territory they cover, and the marvelous light that they shed on the great problems of existence. Her Isis Unveiled called forth a storm of criticism, for as she said in the preface it was "offerèd to such as are willing to accept truth wherever it may be found, and to defend it, even looking popular prejudice straight in the face." It was the first great challenge of Theosophy, the Ancient Wisdom-Religion, to dogmatism, both of science and theology, and a challenge to sham and superstition wherever found. The greatest of her works followed some years later, in 1888, The Secret Doctrine, a work colossal in its magnitude, revealing a scheme of evolution in which the Darwinian theory, so far as it is true, is but a chapter, and embracing not only man, but worlds and systems of worlds. What were looked upon by superficial and prejudiced people when these books were first published as so many vagaries and wild dreams, are yearly receiving corroboration as scientific fact. For her students she wrote The Key to Theosophy, and for those who sought the path of the inner spiritual life she published The Voice of the Silence.

H. P. BLAVATSKY THE CENTRAL FIGURE AND TEACHER. AIDED BY W. Q. JUDGE, WHO ALONE RESPONDS TO INNER PURPOSE OF THEOSOPHICAL WORK.

In speaking of the formation of the Theosophical Society in 1875 it must be remembered that it was for this purpose that Madame Blavatsky came to America; that the plan was hers, but that unfamiliar with conditions in Western countries she instructed Col. H. S. Olcott and William Q. Judge to attend to the details of its organization; but it was she, Madame Blavatsky alone, who had the knowledge which was to be the basis and the guide of the present Theosophical Movement, and this she had not only from her studies and travels, but from her Teacher — one of the few men now living who have knowledge of the deeper truths of life — the wisdom possessed by the ancients, not recorded in books, or handed down in archives, but passed from one to another down the ages by word of mouth, and whose representatives today stand back of and are sustainers of the present Theosophical Movement, as represented by Katherine Tingley and the UNIVERSAL BROTHERHOOD AND THEOSOPHICAL SOCIETY. Col. Olcott, whom Madame Blavatsky met shortly before she formed the Theosophical Society in New York, had up to that time known nothing at all about Theosophy. While we have every reason to believe that he was sincere, yet we have no evidence that he made any great effort to lead the Theosophic life; but no doubt Madame Blavatsky saw that he had possibilities of faithfulness and service, and so, as with many others, she gave him his chance. In her modesty and unselfish desire to bring Theosophy to the attention of all people and make it a telling power in the world, she sounded Col. Olcott's praises so far as she could, and he was named President-Founder, being elected to the presidency of the Society for the first year of its existence. It should be mentioned here that his term of office was defined as for one year, and that he was never legally re-elected. Please remember that in her treatment of Col. Olcott, as all her students know, Madame Blavatsky showed her great wisdom, using every means to call out the higher nature of the man and give him the opportunity to develop along higher lines, which, if he had continued to avail himself of them after she died, would have made his name one of the most respected in the history of the Theosophical Movement.

As for William Q. Judge who, in addition to his splendid business qualities and legal ability, had as well high spiritual attainments — of all H. P. Blavatsky's students and colleagues, he stood the closest to her, as shown by her correspondence and writings, and he received from her some of the priceless instructions regarding the deeper truths of life, which she gave to no other of her disciples. His life and character were proof to those who knew him that he was soulfully imbued with the high purpose of serving humanity. Probably one great incentive in his life in this direction was the inborn consciousness that he had of the conditions of his native land — church-ridden Ireland. He resided in Dublin until he was thirteen and then, his mother having died, he came with his father to this country. In New York he studied law, and was beginning to achieve success in its practice. Not satisfied, however, with the ordinary aims of life he was searching for its deeper meaning, and in his search, Madame Blavatsky hearing of him sent for him. This was in 1874, and from then until her death he was her faithful disciple and colleague and afterwards became her successor.

At the beginning of the Society we therefore have Madame Blavatsky as a central figure, with her two helpers, William Q. Judge and Col. Olcott, the latter helping in outer exoteric lines, in matters of the outer business of the organization, and the former, William Q. Judge, working in the outer organization with Col. Olcott, but also receiving instructions not only from his teacher H. P. Blavatsky but directly from the same source from which she received her knowledge (our authority for this is Madame Blavatsky herself), and working with her toward the upbuilding of the spiritual life of mankind. Under her direction and with his spiritual insight, which was recognised among the few faithful ones who were near him, he formulated the rules of the Esoteric School, which at his request Madame Blavatsky established in 1888. I shall speak of this later.

Even ordinary students of human nature and of the conditions that obtained when Madame Blavatsky established this Society can see that with the exception of William Q. Judge, none of those who started with her in this work were deeply grounded in spiritual truths, or in soul life, and as was later proved there was at that time William Q. Judge alone who saw the real purpose of her work, and responded to her teachings. Thus there was a danger among those who became associated with Madame Blavatsky that ambition would grow. We see the two men who were closest to her, who had the same opportunity, one moving on so long as Madame Blavatsky was there to direct his movements and hold him in check, doing much excellent work for the Society, but, as was clearly shown after Madame Blavatsky had passed away, permitting the seeds of ambition and vanity to grow. Later he forgot the obligations he was under to his teacher, and sought to discredit her influence in the spread of Theosophy in order that he might fill a larger place in its history. Looking at the other man, it can be seen that every act of William Q. Judge showed his growth into a wider consciousness and deeper knowledge. The subordination of his personality, his modesty in going before the people, never taking advantage of his position to exercise an influence over them, all were indicative of the man; and all the time there went out from him in correspondence, and in his writings as editor of his magazine, The Path — even from his very presence — a spiritual uplifting influence which has been a source of help to many faithful students who now revere his memory and seek to pattern their lives after his.

So little aid had William Q. Judge in the early days that in his magazine, The Path, founded and edited by him, often all the articles were by himself, written over different pseudonyms, yet so versatile was he that none could have recognised it. Often he would work in his law office all day and then write all night for his magazine, or sometimes paint sketches which he would sell to art dealers for money to pay the printers or buy postage stamps for Theosophical work. And then his correspondence to all parts of the world: how many would apply to him for teaching, for a solution of their difficulties, for advice, and his words were as healing balm on many a throbbing wound.

This was the man whom Dr. Elliot Coues had sought to vilify and displace.

For her Society, for the cause of Theosophy, Madame Blavatsky counted her own life as nought; she sacrificed herself at times almost recklessly. Realizing the limited time she had in this one incarnation and the awful need of the world, the spiritual pride and darkness, the people crying for a light to guide them — she worked night and day, writing, writing, writing, that the message of Theosophy surging from her heart and illuminating her mind might be recorded for all future generations.

Suffering intensely from overwork, by the force of her will she maintained life in her tired body until she had sown the seed. Yet it is beyond doubt that this last attack by Dr. Elliot Coues and the New York Sun helped to shorten her days. It caused too a sifting of some of the half-hearted from the ranks of the Theosophical Society. At every attack there have been some few who have drifted away — the fear of being blamed, of identification with an unpopular cause, have obscured their love for humanity, and like soldiers deserting at the first shot from the enemy, they fled the ranks; like Peter denying his Master, they threw mud at their Teacher. It was about this time, 1888, that Mrs. Annie Besant sought an interview with H. P. Blavatsky. She showed a deep interest in Theosophy, and there are those who can testify that she realized and admitted the errors in her former views as publicly promulgated by her, which in many ways were the very antithesis of Theosophy. Remember, that at that time Mrs. Besant was before the public, not popular, it is true, but accustomed to public work of a certain nature, and Madame Blavatsky was in need of all the help she could obtain. Thus when Mrs. Besant came to her she gave her an opportunity to reconstruct her life and become a worker in the Theosophic Cause.

FORMATION OF ESOTERIC SECTION. H. P. BLAVATSKY'S ENDORSEMENT OF W. Q. JUDGE.

It was announced that I would relate some incidents in the history of the Theosophical Movement which have not hitherto been made public, and one of these, or rather a series of them, is connected with the history of what among students was formerly known as the Esoteric Section, or the Esoteric School of Theosophy. This inner body of students was re-organized by Katherine Tingley in 1898, at the same time the UNIVERSAL BROTHERHOOD AND THEOSOPHICAL SOCIETY adopted its new constitution at Chicago. Now I have permission from Mme. Tingley to tell you something of its history.

In 1888, the same year in which The Secret Doctrine, Madame Blavatsky's greatest work, was published, William Q. Judge from New York wrote to Madame Blavatsky in London suggesting the formation of a body of students, to consist of those who were earnestly seeking to make Theosophy a practical power in their daily lives, and for the aid that would come from the study of its deeper teachings. Many people have wondered what was the great power that has held this organization together. There have been many reasons for its growth and strength, but one especially has been this body of students just referred to, binding them together for the furtherance of the Theosophical work.

On the request of his Teacher, Madame Blavatsky, William Q. Judge drafted the rules of that body under which it is still governed. In this body of students a pledge was taken which I have Mme. Tingley's permission to read to you, but before doing so it will no doubt be of interest to you to know that at the time of Katherine Tingley's libel suit against the Los Angeles Times, and its editor, General Harrison Gray Otis, the position taken by the defendants was that all students of Theosophy were bound by a pledge to obey Katherine Tingley in every detail of their lives. As to how far they are pledged you will presently see. The pledge was introduced by the opposing attorney, and was probably obtained from the hands of an unfaithful member. As Katherine

Tingley said at the time, nothing could have served her case better, for it shows plainly that there is nothing in the obligation binding students to obey Katherine Tingley personally or in any other interest in their lives except as students of Theosophy — she the Teacher, they the students. The pledge was read in Court, and it was very amusing to notice the confusion of the defendant's attorneys when they realized that the obligation to follow the Leader and Official Head — Katherine Tingley — of this Organization, was in respect only to Theosophic duties, and contains not one word of reference, nor does it include any hint, as to anything outside specific work for the Theosophical Movement. This obligation, then, is as follows:

*            *            *            *            *            *

It is of interest to note that Col. Olcott was never allowed by Madame Blavatsky to become a member of this Esoteric Section, and after her death, when no longer under her inspiring influence and restraint, it was shown in his correspondence and in other ways that he had the greatest jealousy not only of this body, but also of Mr. Judge personally. William Q. Judge was the only member in the Esoteric body of whom H. P. Blavatsky required no pledge, for he, as Madame Blavatsky herself states, had given his pledge to her own Teacher thirteen years previously, namely in 1875, which was the year of the foundation of the Theosophical Society in New York. Mrs. Annie Besant, who did not join the organization until thirteen years later, 1888, became a pledged member of this Esoteric body, and was pledged to observe the rules.

Now as to William Q. Judge's position in the Theosophical Movement. We have seen how when he was attacked by Dr. Elliot Coues, Madame Blavatsky stood by and defended him. Let me quote from an official letter written by Madame Blavatsky to the Convention of the American Societies in 1888. The letter began as follows:

TO WILLIAM Q. JUDGE, General Secretary of the American Section of the Theosophical Society:

My dearest Brother and Co-founder of the Theosophical Society:

In addressing to you this letter, which I request you to read to the Convention summoned for April 22d, I must first present my hearty congratulations and most cordial good wishes to the Society and to yourself — the heart and soul of that body in America. We were several to call it to life in 1875. Since then you have remained alone to preserve that life through good and evil report. It is to you chiefly, if not entirely, that the Theosophical Society owes its existence in 1888. Let me thank you for it, for the first, and perhaps for the last time publicly and from the bottom of my heart, which beats only for the cause you represent so well and serve so faithfully. I ask you also to remember that, on this important occasion, my voice is but the feeble echo of other more sacred voices, and the transmitter of the approval of Those whose presence is alive in more than one true Theosophical heart, and lives, as I know, pre-eminently in yours.

Further, H. P. Blavatsky, in December of the same year, wrote the following:

As Head of the Esoteric Section of the Theosophical Society, I hereby declare that William Q. Judge of New York, U. S. A., in virtue of his character as a disciple of thirteen years' standing and of the trust and confidence reposed in him, is my only representative for said Section in America, and he is the sole channel through whom will be sent and received all communications between the members of the said Section and myself, and to him full faith, confidence, and credit in that regard are to be given.

And as if in prophetic anticipation of the outrageous attack later made upon him by Mrs. Besant, to whom Madame Blavatsky had given the opportunity to live the better life, and the bitter onslaughts of ambition against his position so faithfully held by him, H. P. Blavatsky, on October 23, 1889, wrote:

The Esoteric Section and its life in the U. S. A. depend upon W. Q. Judge remaining its agent and what he is now. The day W. Q. Judge resigns, H. P. Blavatsky will be virtually dead for the Americans.

Furthermore, Madame Blavatsky declared in writing that after her death W. Q. Judge was to take her place in America, and no other construction or meaning can be placed upon these statements save to regard them as being actually meant by Madame Blavatsky, and that in such case, should William Q. Judge resign it would mean the death of Theosophy in America. The application of this we shall refer to later.

As said, Col. H. S. Olcott, the first President of the Society, never was a member of this inner body of students, which, as we know, was the soul and life of the Theosophical Society, the latter being but the outer form for the dissemination of exoteric teachings to the public; also that William Q. Judge was the only member who was not required to take a pledge therein; that Mrs. Annie Besant was a pledged member, pledged to observe the rules; that later, Madame Blavatsky, to encourage her in her work, appointed her as Recorder of the teachings which Madame Blavatsky gave to her students.

H. P. BLAVATSKY'S DEATH. SOCIETY RE-ORGANIZED. ENORMOUS MAJORITY SUPPORTS W. Q. JUDGE. HE DIES SHORTLY AFTER VINDICATION.

After H. P. Blavatsky's death W. Q. Judge — whose position as Teacher and successor of Madame Blavatsky was assured by the latter's written statements, and who was moreover the only one qualified for that position by virtue of his knowledge, his service, and his long training under H. P. Blavatsky and her Teachers — gave to Mrs. Besant the greatest opportunity of her life for spiritual progress — an opportunity to show her loyalty to her teacher H. P. Blavatsky, and her devotion to the cause of Theosophy. Doubtless supposing that she would carry out her professions in act, appealing to the best side of her nature, and as she was free to give her time and energy to the Theosophical Cause, he gave to her this opportunity to help in carrying out the plan of work begun by H. P. Blavatsky. It must be remembered that at that time she showed no sign outwardly of the ambition which later developed, and one may charitably suppose that she was making a sincere effort to lead a Theosophic life that she might better help humanity.

For a time after Madame Blavatsky's death, to all appearances, Mrs. Besant worked faithfully. Not a year had passed, however, before the first prominent symptom of her ambition showed itself in her accusation against Col. H. S. Olcott, whose resignation from the Presidency (which office he held only by courtesy, not legally) she demanded. Under this unbrotherly pressure and threats of Mrs. Besant, Col. Olcott did resign, but William Q. Judge, using all his influence, persuaded the American members to adopt such action as to prevent this from taking effect, and he ultimately withdrew his resignation. Failing in her efforts in this direction, and there being but Col. Olcott and William Q. Judge between her and the goal of her ambition, which — such was the opinion of many of the faithful students of Theosophy — was to govern the Theosophical Society throughout the world, and much to the surprise of some of her fellow-workers who had heretofore trusted her, Mrs. Besant began subtle attempts to undermine the influence of Mr. Judge. This she attempted to do first by secret correspondence to all parts of the world, in direct violation of her solemn and sacred pledge, which was “I pledge myself never to listen without protest to any evil thing spoken of a Brother Theosophist, and to abstain from condemning others,” seeking for and listening to unproven, unprovable, and utterly false statements against him.

Her charge against William Q. Judge was that certain statements given by him as coming from his Teacher in India, who, as said, had also been Madame Blavatsky's Teacher, were, to quote her own words, “given a misleading form.” There is no question that many of the public, hearing of Mrs. Besant's accusations, came to think that he had committed some immoral, dishonest, and criminal act. Think of it! The absurdity of this member so recently come into the work — for remember she did not enter the Theosophical work until 1888 — who had never been a direct pupil of Madame Blavatsky's Teacher, but only of Madame Blavatsky herself — the absurdity of her presuming to stand in judgment of an advanced, accepted, and faithful worker such as William Q. Judge! Finally, in 1894, she openly attacked him, as well as the honor of her own teacher, H. P. Blavatsky. So determined was she to carry her point and bring her plans to fruition, so insidious were the disintegrating forces set in motion by her, and so subversive of the principles on which were founded the Theosophical Movement, and especially the inner body of students, of which, as said, Mrs. Besant was a pledged member, pledged to observe the rules, that for a time it appeared as though the harmony of the Society would be so disturbed that it would take a long time before it could recover. And remember too that William Q. Judge at that time was ill and overworked.

Moreover, in spite of Madame Blavatsky's statement regarding William Q. Judge, that “The day W. Q. Judge resigns, H. P. Blavatsky will be virtually dead for the Americans,” Mrs. Besant used every means TO FORCE HIM TO RESIGN; thus again setting her Teacher at naught, at the same time trying to cajole him with a promise that if he would resign, he could still have some place in the Theosophical Society.

Is it not plain to see that Mrs. Besant was willing to sacrifice the whole Theosophical Society to gain her end? for she took a position directly opposed to the emphatic statement of her own Teacher, Madame Blavatsky.

It was at this juncture that the American members, headed by the Aryan Theosophical Society of New York and the Boston Society, determined to take action. Finally at the annual Convention of the American Societies at Boston in 1895, by a vote of 191 delegates to 10, William Q. Judge was elected President for life, Mrs. Besant being voted out of the Society and all connexion with her and her associates severed and repudiated. This vote represented a majority of the active members throughout the world, and this majority was still further increased by similar action being taken by members in England, Holland, Sweden, Germany, Australia, India, and other countries. In India there was on the roll an apparently large number of branches of the Theosophical Society that supported Mrs. Besant, but upon investigation it was found that in very many instances these branches existed only on paper or had one or two active members in good standing. This was later confirmed by Katherine Tingley when she visited India on her first Crusade around the world in 1896-7, when her agents made careful investigation.

Thus was William Q. Judge vindicated, but he lived only eleven months longer and passed away March 21, 1896, after intense suffering due in the main to the malicious persecution to which he had been subjected.

The principal agitator against William Q. Judge in this country and chief promoter of the repudiated body, at the head of which is Mrs. Besant, was Alexander Fullerton, whose downward path evidently began at about that time, and which at last caused him to be arrested for sending immoral matter through the mails to a boy — I shall refer to this again.

As Madame Blavatsky has said, "Facts are pitchforks," but they must be brought out if we are to protect the weak and the innocent. We must refer to and protest against such things, else in a sense we become a party to them; and unpleasant as it is, if we have the knowledge we have also the duty to see that the public is warned.

The wisdom of the action that was taken at the 1895 Convention at Boston has been amply proved, and the very fact that from time to time false statements are made by those who feel it to their interest to mislead the public to further their own ends, gives a further source of congratulation that they are not in any way identified with us, to the end that the real Theosophical work may not be obstructed. There are many inquirers seeking the right path all the time, as well as new members, to whom we owe a duty; and besides we must have a true record of history to pass down to succeeding generations.

It is a well-known fact that the UNIVERSAL BROTHERHOOD AND THEOSOPHICAL SOCIETY does not issue any statement as to the number of its branches or members. It has no need for doing so. Its influence is world-wide and is felt in every country of the globe. The great bulk of the membership in the Organization is what is known as membership-at-large; and such members are directly attached through correspondence and association with our International Headquarters at Point Loma.

KATHERINE TINGLEY SUCCESSOR TO W. Q. JUDGE AND H. P. BLAVATSKY.
ENORMOUS INCREASE IN MEMBERSHIP. KATHERINE TINGLEY'S INSISTENCE
ON THE APPLICATION OF THEOSOPHY TO EVERYDAY LIFE. BITTER ATTACKS AGAINST THEOSOPHICAL INSTITUTION AT POINT LOMA. KATHERINE
TINGLEY SUES LOS ANGELES 'TIMES' FOR LIBEL. DASTARDLY
ANONYMOUS ATTACKS AGAINST KATHERINE TINGLEY.

In March, 1896, Mr. Judge died, leaving as his successor Katherine Tingley, who for several years had been associated with him in the work of the Society. In the early days there had to be branches — we had not then our printing presses nor our extensive correspondence and propaganda bureaus; but when Katherine Tingley visited the branches during her first Theosophical Crusade around the world shortly after the death of William Q. Judge, she found that during the two years' illness of Mr. Judge before his death all sorts of abuses had crept into many of these branches: often a man with a loud voice and a dominant personality, who perhaps, even with a collegiate education, had made no success whatever in his life in the outer world, would force himself to the front, energetic perhaps on material and mental lines, but as to spirituality woefully lacking and wholly unfitted for the directing of a local body of Theosophical students. Others sought to make the branches a stamping-ground for the airing of their own personal views and for the gratification of their ambition either to obtain a position of power or to air their opinions before the public, and the majority of the branches then existing were subject to these conditions.

Thus it has been that there were many occasions to discourage the continuation of centers and the formation of new ones; for the spread of Theosophy — let it be clearly said — depends first of all upon the life and character of those who profess it. “Theosophist is who Theosophy does,” to quote from Madame Blavatsky.

This action of Katherine Tingley brought to the UNIVERSAL BROTHERHOOD AND THEOSOPHICAL SOCIETY many new members who had hitherto held back from joining the local societies, and in the first two years after Katherine Tingley became Leader and Official Head the membership of the Society throughout the world was trebled in numbers.

Recently a lecturer from the Orient lecturing in San Diego for Mrs. Besant's society made a statement which I cannot let pass without protest. He is reported to have declared regarding certain small pseudo-theosophical bodies, probably in defence of his own position and that of the society he represents, that

It does not matter what the name is so long as a person is proclaiming the truths of Reincarnation and Karma and the possibilities of the spiritual life. It is the great work of Theosophy; it does not matter what organization is doing it.

And so other persons unthinkingly might say. But not so the true Theosophist. It does matter what is the life and character of those who are proclaiming Theosophy. It does matter that the one who gives out these truths shall endeavor to apply them to his own daily life. Let me ask: Is there not too much already of cant and hypocrisy in the world? As H. P. Blavatsky says: “Cant is the most loathsome of all vices,” and the enmity and antagonism that Katherine Tingley has aroused in certain quarters is because she insists that there shall be not only the profession, but also the actual carrying out among her students of the truths of Theosophy in everyday life.

As the Theosophical work progressed under the direction of Katherine Tingley the great majority of the members showed the most satisfactory results in the grasping of the opportunities given, but the Society was not yet entirely free from those factors that are to be found in all societies, and so from time to time an upstart for Theosophic honors would appear in the arena, with projects quite adverse to its real interests, attempting to use Theosophy to cover his selfish plans. In every case, however, such people, not being able to keep up with the procession, found themselves not at home in the Society, driven out by the full force of the high ideals and the purity of the Theosophic life which was demanded of them. Whenever any one of these delinquents found the opportunity to further his pet project he has attempted to do it, and so the word ‘Theosophy’ has been used as a cover for false teaching and to mislead the public. But the re-organization of the Theosophical Society and its enlargement by which it became merged into the UNIVERSAL BROTHERHOOD AND THEOSOPHICAL SOCIETY at the convention at Chicago in 1898, which action was taken by an almost unanimous vote, has proved to be a blessing to all faithful members and followers of the teachings of H. P. Blavatsky, and has precluded all future possibility of the Society being rent in twain, or having its libraries separated or lost, and its interests affected by quasi-Theosophists.

I have often heard Mme. Tingley express sympathy for the public and make many excuses for their prejudices and even for their calumnies, for she has said that Theosophy has too often been judged by the deplorable examples found in the lives of those delinquents.

Not many years ago the public mind was startled by certain maliciously false statements published in the yellow journals both in America and Europe against Katherine Tingley, her work and her schools. The prime authors of these statements were two men whose names are known — one who for four years had been under the treatment of a prominent physician in New Orleans (whose affidavit we have to that effect) for insanity, and who boasted that it was his mission in life to tear down Katherine Tingley and to exalt Mrs. Besant, in order, as he said, that the members of the original Theosophical Society, of which Katherine Tingley, as successor to H. P. Blavatsky and William Q. Judge, was and is the Leader and Official Head, might be induced to support Mrs. Besant. These two men privately circulated malicious reports against Katherine Tingley, consisting of the greatest calumnies and falsehoods — the greater part being made out of whole cloth and part of distorted truths. It was this matter, typewritten — not printed, for they dared not publish it and dared not send it through the mails — which was passed around surreptitiously. It was shown to newspaper editors — and I could give you the actual names of some editors to whom it was shown and who refused to take any notice of it.

There can be no doubt that this dastardly false statement was, in part at least, the basis of the libelous article published October 1901 in the Los Angeles Times (see Appendix) against Katherine Tingley and the Theosophical Institution at Point Loma, which caused Katherine Tingley to bring action against the publishers, the Times-Mirror Publishing Company and General Harrison Gray Otis, President of the Company and Editor of the paper. The outcome of the suit is well known: Katherine Tingley was completely vindicated, and was awarded heavy damages. This same statement was shown to ministers, even in San Diego, and to members of Mrs. Besant's Society and to any one else who it was thought might be influenced against Katherine Tingley and her work, and the original Theosophical Society, which has its headquarters at Point Loma. Furthermore, it was this dastardly false and malicious statement that was the basis of the attacks against Katherine Tingley made by the Gerry Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children in New York, when they detained eleven Cuban children and one of our lady physicians, holding them on Ellis Island on the plea that the Râja-Yoga School at Point Loma was no fit place for children. You all know how this ended, how Katherine Tingley *demand*ed that an investigation of her School and College at Point Loma be made by the United States Government; how Commissioner-General Sargent of the Bureau of Immigration personally made such an investigation and reported favorably to President Roosevelt, with the result that the children were ordered to be sent on to their destination at Point Loma, where they are at the present time.*

One may well ask, Why should these men go to the trouble of circulating such a tissue of falsehoods against a world-worker and humanitarian, one whose whole life was being spent for the uplifting of Humanity? But when it is known that Katherine Tingley knew of the Jekyll-and-Hyde life of one of them, and that he feared that some day she might lift the veil and show his hypocrisy, is it not plain to any casual observer that all these calumnious efforts of his against Mme. Tingley were an attempt to bring such discredit upon her and her work that she would not be believed?

This man was Alexander Fullerton, whom I have already named, and who at that time held the highest official position in the United States of America in the society of which Mrs. Besant was President, and which she calls "Theosophical"! He was later (Feb. 18, 1910) arrested for sending indecent and immoral matter to a young lad through the United States mails. He confessed and was being held for trial by the United States Federal Court when through the influence of friends he was adjudged insane and placed in a State Lunatic Asylum, where he has since died. Fullerton was arrested Feb. 18, 1910, and in Mrs. Besant's official magazine published in India, dated March, 1910, is an article by her, eulogistic of this man and speaking of him as a "Theosophical Worthy"! Surely comment is not necessary.

It is a matter of simple justice that these facts should be known, for they help to explain what was behind the persecution of the Leader of the Theosophical organization, Katherine Tingley, and the institutions which she directs.

Had not Fullerton fallen into the hands of the law through his crimes he would in a short time have been brought into the courts of New York for his libelous and infamous work against Katherine Tingley. His coadjutor was irresponsible and was but a tool in his hands, this being proven by his own statements to Katherine Tingley's father, who at that time was devoting his whole energy — though an old man of seventy-five years — to run down and expose these traducers, but in the midst of his efforts he overtaxed his strength and died suddenly.

CALUMNIATORS DEFEATED IN ATTEMPTS TO EXPLOIT SOCIETY FOR PERSONAL
ENDS. THEOSOPHY AND WORK AT POINT LOMA FALSELY GIVEN AS CAUSE OF FAMILY TROUBLES.

How the Society has been used by those seeking to exploit it for personal ends cannot be told fully here tonight, but there are one or two striking points that I will mention and that serve to lift the veil on questions of the separation of families, with which Katherine Tingley has been so often charged. Several instances have occurred since the International Headquarters were established at Point Loma in which efforts have been made to use Theosophy and Point Loma as a basis to serve in divorce proceedings and in other family matters, such as the separation of parents and children, and husband and wife. The first instance that I will refer to is that of a man, residing in another state, who for several years previously had not only neglected his wife, but whose life was said to be so immoral that she deserted him and then secured a divorce, the courts giving her the custody of their only child, a daughter. The mother married again — a member of the Theosophical Society — and later died. Her last wish was that her daughter might be placed in the school at Point Loma to complete her education and to have such protection as to keep her from any association with her father, whose conduct had broken up the home. Not long after her admission to the school the father appeared in San Diego and demanded the custody of his daughter, circulating malicious stories that Mme. Tingley was separating father from child. He brought his case into the courts of San Diego, and papers were served on Katherine Tingley that she was holding the child; but when the case came on for trial this child herself placed facts in the hands of the lawyers in regard to her mother's statements and her desire that she should not associate with her father, with the result that the case was dismissed. But the enemies, gossips in San Diego and elsewhere, and yellow journals caught up the father's story, and the falsehoods given out by him have never been completely overtaken by the truth. It was learned afterwards that it was Alexander Fullerton, above referred to, who encouraged the father in making his attack upon Katherine Tingley and the Theosophical Institutions. This girl is still at the International Headquarters at Point Loma.

Another case that created a great stir at the time was that of a certain man residing in Chicago who planned a visit of his wife and children to Point Loma, they to remain there for three months while he went on a trip up the Coast and possibly to Honolulu. This man, with his family, arrived at Point Loma and even made application to enter his children in the school, although for years he had been an open and bitter enemy of Theosophy notwithstanding that his wife was a member of the UNIVERSAL BROTHERHOOD AND THEOSOPHICAL SOCIETY. Mme. Tingley, suspecting his motives, told him she had reason to believe he intended to desert his wife. She refused to accept the children as pupils but said they and their mother might remain on a visit as paying guests for three months, the mother's health being greatly broken down. The husband even paid money in advance both for his wife and children, and departed, as he said, upon his trip. Two days later he appeared at the Point Loma Homestead in a carriage and made an attempt to kidnap the two children. Through the mother's efforts, however, he did not succeed, but later brought habeas corpus proceedings against Katherine Tingley for restraining the children, with which, of course, she had nothing to do, they being in the sole care of the mother, and Mme. Tingley having refused to admit them into the school. A similar writ of habeas corpus was directed by the husband against his wife, charging her also with imprisoning the children whom, bear in mind, he had voluntarily left in her sole custody a few days before. Katherine Tingley appeared in court with her attorney, but immediately on opening the case it was dismissed on application of the man himself. A short time later he succeeded in bringing this case before the Los Angeles court, and an old clause of the laws was strained to the point that a sheriff's officer called at Point Loma and took the children away, the mother following, although prostrated by serious illness at the time.

Owing to the fact that the wife withheld her most important evidence against her husband on the advice of her lawyer; owing to the fact that she had already brought suit for divorce in Chicago and was intending to return there to prosecute it the following week; owing also to the fact that much of the evidence submitted by the plaintiff and witnesses was perjured; and in spite of the fact that the custody of children cannot be settled in a habeas corpus proceeding, this being the only contention between the litigants, the Los Angeles courts gave the father temporary custody of the children, this being the extent of its judicial power; and if the mother wished to recover her children permanently she must go to Chicago to enter suit there. However, under the advice of her Chicago lawyer and of her oldest and closest friends, she did not go, as she was reliably informed that her husband and her mother, who was a physician and had been for years the principal disturbing element in her family life, had planned to place her in an insane asylum — this, I understand, was at that time easily done in Illinois. The wife, in her despair, resorted to the California courts, seeking a divorce and the custody of her children on the ground of the adultery of her husband with her own mother, who, according to the statement of many who knew her private life, was a cruel, immoral woman, although outwardly she conformed to the conventional standards of respectability. This woman, named as co-respondent by the wife, was also a bitter enemy of Katherine Tingley, being a member of Mrs. Besant's society, and having formerly entertained some of Mrs. Besant's lecturers. Further, she had never forgiven Katherine Tingley for ignoring her application for a position, although a total stranger to her, upon her (Katherine Tingley's) medical staff at the time of the latter's first Crusade to Cuba when President McKinley so liberally aided and indorsed her work, giving free transportation on the U. S. Transport Berlin to Katherine Tingley and her band of physicians and nurses and supplies of food, medicine and clothing.

Unfortunately for the wife, the California courts could not hear her case until she had been a resident in the State for one year, and the case was further delayed by a clerical error in the first bill filed which, although a mere technicality, necessitated re-filing and an additional three-months' delay. In the meantime the father brought suit in the Illinois courts and gained possession of the children because the wife was not present to oppose. Now it will be of interest to you to know that according to the wife's own statements it was Katherine Tingley's advice alone that had sustained her in living the last three years with this man who, so the wife says, had abused all rights as a husband.

The wife had applied to Katherine Tingley three years previously, saying that she could stand her life no longer because of the unnatural and pernicious influence her mother had for some years exercised over her husband, to the extent, in fact, that the real home life had seemingly been hopelessly destroyed. She told Katherine Tingley that she had determined to sue for a divorce, but Katherine Tingley urged her not to give up trying to keep her home intact for the sake of her children, but to make still another effort. This man, who was a business man in Chicago, although he succeeded in taking the children from their heartbroken mother's arms temporarily, has not succeeded in effacing from the public mind the charges which his wife brought out against him to establish her case, although he has gone very much out of his way in attempting to do this, so that even to this day he is very bitter and is still found working behind the scenes wherever possible to injure Katherine Tingley and the good name of Theosophy. His calumnies are mostly in interviews, and in his correspondence he rehashes the rotten matter before referred to, which was circulated by Alexander Fullerton and his aide above mentioned. He asserts that he has proof, and when an attempt is made to get him to give proof, when he is forced into a corner, he clears himself by saying to those who demand proofs that he has none, but only that his statements are based on newspaper stories.

Other attempts to involve Theosophy have been made by men who have tried to get rid of their wives, and they have named Theosophy and the work at Point Loma as a cause to cover their own mistakes and gain sympathy from a misinformed public. In every case, however, they have been defeated, though another link in the slander is added.

We feel that all lovers of truth and justice will be glad these statements have been made, which barely touch on the surface of many of the cruel misrepresentations which Theosophy has had to suffer.

At some other time I hope to give further historical matter which will chronicle pleasanter incidents in the history of the Theosophical Movement.

CONCLUSION

WORK AT POINT LOMA. SCHOOL OF ANTIQUITY. GREAT LIBRARY.
KATHERINE TINGLEY THE TEACHER.

IT would be impossible to give here a detailed account of the growth and development of the many activities at Point Loma, yet even a brief sketch such as this would be incomplete without some reference to them.

First then, at Point Loma are located the International Headquarters of the UNIVERSAL BROTHERHOOD AND THEOSOPHICAL SOCIETY which, as will already have been seen from the above, is the direct continuation, de jure and de facto, of the original Theosophical Society founded by Madame Blavatsky in New York in 1875. From this world-center and International Headquarters the work of this vast Organization is carried on in all parts of the world.

It has already been stated that the membership of the Society was trebled in the first two years of Katherine Tingley's leadership, and it may further be said that the work has increased at least five-fold during the past year. The propaganda and correspondence bureaus are taxed to their limit, while the Aryan Theosophical Press, founded by William Q. Judge in 1888 in New York, and now established at Point Loma, even with all the increased facilities of new printing presses, monotype machinery, book-bindery, and photo-engraving department, is already inadequate to supply the demand for literature from all over the world.

One of the most interesting phases of life at Point Loma is the student life. In 1897 Katherine Tingley founded the School of Antiquity, the aims of which are as follows:

Although American in center, this school is international in character, a Temple of Living Light, lighting up the dark places of the earth. Through this school and its branches the children of the race will be taught the laws of physical life, and physical, moral, and mental health and spiritual unfoldment. They will learn to live in harmony with nature — they will become compassionate lovers of all that breathes, they will grow strong in an understanding of themselves, and as they gain strength they will learn to use it for the good of the whole world.

Connected with the School of Antiquity is the School of Antiquity Library in which are many rare and valuable books. The original nucleus of this was a gift by Rev. S. J. Neill of a fine collection of books many years ago, since which time the library has grown enormously, so that there are now several thousand volumes. These are at present temporarily housed, awaiting the erection of the School of Antiquity Temple which is to be their permanent home — the corner-stone of which is already laid. In addition to the above there are also at Point Loma the Aryan Theosophical Library and the International Headquarters Library.

Already the School of Antiquity numbers among its students — and all are students at Point Loma, gratefully acknowledging Katherine Tingley as their Teacher — men and women from all walks in life and every profession: musicians, artists, writers, physicians, lawyers, engineers, business men, craftsmen, and artisans. Fortunate indeed are these students, for they have the privilege of receiving from their Teacher, Katherine Tingley, the priceless instructions of Theosophy, the Wisdom-Religion.

Those who are closest to Katherine Tingley assert, and do so from actual experience of the results, that she has access to the same source of wisdom as had her illustrious predecessors, H. P. Blavatsky and William Q. Judge. There were many teachings which H. P. Blavatsky gave to no one but her faithful colleague and successor, William Q. Judge, and others which he also received direct from Madame Blavatsky's Teacher. All of these were in turn handed to his successor Katherine Tingley. These, together with the great knowledge which she herself has, form the basis of the deeper instructions given to the faithful students at Point Loma, as and when they become worthy and qualified to receive the same.

And this instruction is not some far-off mystical teaching, but that which can be applied here and now. It is not any strange dabbling in weird phenomena, not any attempt to develop abnormal psychic powers, clairvoyance, the seeing of astral colors or the hearing of astral sounds — these have nothing whatever to do with the spiritual life, the inner divine life of man, but are dangerous hindrances, not aids. But the teaching given by Katherine Tingley to her students is practical, applicable to our everyday life. It calls for the purification of one's nature, self-control, self-conquest; it is a benediction upon the home, and an uplifting power in the life of every man and woman who will follow it, giving a better understanding of life and its sacred opportunities.

The International Theosophical Headquarters at Point Loma is destined to be and has in part already become a great seat of learning where are being studied these deeper and inner teachings of the great science of life, Theosophy, and its students are engaged in many lines of deeper research that have a profound significance in regard to the future welfare of humanity, the results of which will in due time be made known to the world.

APPENDIX

FOR the information of those not acquainted with the facts, the following statement is made:

In October, 1901, an article was published in the Los Angeles Times by the Times-Mirror Company, of which Gen. Harrison Gray Otis is president, he being also Editor of the paper, in which outrageously false statements were made against Katherine Tingley and the Point Loma Institution. In consequence of this, Katherine Tingley brought a libel suit against the Times-Mirror Company and Gen. Otis. This libel suit was tried before Judge Torrance of the Superior Court in San Diego, December 1902, and January 1903, being concluded January 13, 1903, when the jury rendered a verdict in favor of the plaintiff, Katherine Tingley, completely vindicating her and the Point Loma Institution, and awarding her heavy damages.

It may interest readers to know that GEN. HARRISON GRAY OTIS WAS AT THE TIME VICE-PRESIDENT OF THE ASSOCIATED PRESS!

In his charge to the jury Judge Torrance said again and again to statement after statement which had been made by the defendant Otis and to charges alleged by him:

"I declare to you as a matter of law that there is no legal proof of the truth of that charge, and therefore you must regard it as false."

Note these words:

"I declare to you as a matter of law that there is no legal proof of the truth of that charge, and therefore you must regard it as false."

He further said to the jury: "I deem it of great importance that you should clearly apprehend the real issues in this case. . . . So far as they pertain to the exclusive province of the Court they are these, and the Court thus decides them:

"FIRST.— The publication in the Los Angeles Daily Times complained of in this action was capable of the interpretation placed upon it by the complaint.

"SECOND.— So far as defendant has not denied by its answer (not by the words of its counsel) the meanings attributed to this publication by the complaint the article must have been regarded to have been published, and to have been understood by those who read it, in the sense imputed by the complaint.

"THIRD.— The publication, in all respects in which it is construed by the complaint, is in law libelous."

As said above, the jury returned a verdict for the plaintiff with heavy damages, and the Superior Court Decision was upheld by the State Supreme Court.

MRS. TINGLEY WINS SUIT

CALIFORNIA SUPREME COURT SUSTAINS JUDGMENT OF $7500 AGAINST 'LOS ANGELES TIMES'

Point Loma, Cal., April 3 (Special) — Katherine Tingley has won her libel suit against the Times-Mirror Company, publishers of the Los Angeles Times, Harrison Gray Otis, editor. The decision of the San Diego Superior Court is upheld and judgment for $7500 is affirmed by the State Supreme Court. Four years ago Mrs. Tingley brought suit for libel against the Times and won her case in the Superior Court of San Diego County. Mr. Otis appealed to the Supreme Court for a new trial. The case has been pending for the past three years. The Supreme Court has given Mrs. Tingley a final victory by affirming the decision of the lower court notwithstanding eight hundred or more objections entered by the attorneys for Mr. Otis.—Boston Transcript, April 3, 1907

THEOSOPHY --- UNSECTARIAN AND NON-POLITICAL: by J. H. Fussell

The Theosophical Society is not, then, a political organization?

Certainly not. It is international in the highest sense, in that its members comprise men and women of all races, creeds and forms of thought, who work together for one object — the improvement of humanity; but as a society it takes absolutely no part in any national or party politics.

Why is this?

For the very reasons I have mentioned. Moreover, political action must necessarily vary with the circumstances of the time and with the idiosyncrasies of individuals.— H. P. BLAVATSKY in The Key to Theosophy, pp. 227-228

THE most direct meaning of the word Theosophy is 'Divine Wisdom.' As was explained by Mme. Blavatsky when she first (in our present day) proclaimed again its teachings, it is a term which connotes the 'Wisdom-Religion,' the 'Secret Doctrine,' the primeval truth which was ONE in antiquity and which was the basis of all the great religious Faiths of the world. Just as the one white light passing through a prism is divided into the seven prismatic colored rays, so the one white Light of Truth passing through the prism of the racial mind becomes divided into the different religious faiths. And just as no one of the prismatic rays is or can be regarded as the one white light, or contains the white light in its fulness, but only an aspect of it; so no one of the religious Faiths of the world contains or can be regarded as the whole Truth, though it may contain or present an aspect of the Truth.

For this reason Mme. Blavatsky, from the very foundation of the Theosophical Society, urged upon the members to study comparative religion, to study the great Faiths of the world, to seek out those foundation truths which were common to all and so find again the ancient Wisdom-Religion — Theosophy.

Nowhere, however, and at no time, did she urge the support of any one religious faith or system, seeing that all the religious faiths of the world have become encrusted with theological dogmas and are hedged about with creeds. She makes the following important declaration:

It is perhaps necessary, first of all, to say that the assertion that 'Theosophy is not a Religion,' by no means excludes the fact that 'Theosophy is Religion' itself. A Religion, in the true and only correct sense, is a bond uniting men together — not a particular set of dogmas and beliefs. Now Religion, per se, in its widest meaning is that which binds not only all MEN, but also all BEINGS and all things in the entire Universe into one grand whole. This is our Theosophical definition of religion.

Thus Theosophy is not a Religion, we say, but RELIGION itself, the one bond of unity, which is so universal and all-embracing that no man, as no speck — from gods and mortals down to animals, the blade of grass and atom — can be outside of its light. Therefore, any organization or body of that name must necessarily be a UNIVERSAL BROTHERHOOD.

Accepting this definition of Theosophy as RELIGION itself, and not a religion, it must be clear that neither the Theosophical Society nor any official of the Society has any right to advocate or support any sectarian creed or dogma, or any one religious system, Faith or Church. And to the extent that any one professes to follow Theosophy, if he be sincere in his profession, that is, to the extent that he is a Theosophist, in place of advocating any sectarian creed or dogma, or any one religious system, Faith or Church, in the sense of 'a particular set of dogmas and beliefs,' to the exclusion of or in opposition to other dogmas and beliefs, he will seek behind all these for the kernel of Truth which is common to all religions, and for those truths which are to be found in degree in all. He will hold less and less to the outer forms, creeds and dogmas which divide, and more and more to those teachings which have been universally proven to be true, and which unite. To take any other course would be to go contrary to this universal and basic principle of Theosophy.

It is true that in the Theosophical Society are men and women holding different religious views, Christians, Buddhists, Hindûs, Parsis, etc., and to all such it says: Seek to get at the foundation of the religious faith you profess, and you will find a common meeting-ground with others of different faiths. In an open letter to the Archbishop of Canterbury (1887), Mme. Blavatsky said the following:

Theosophists know that the deeper one penetrates into the meaning of the dogmas and ceremonies of all religions, the greater becomes their apparent underlying similarity, until finally a perception of their fundamental unity is reached. This common ground is no other than Theosophy — the Secret Doctrine of the ages; which, diluted and disguised to suit the capacity of the multitude, and the requirements of the time, has formed the living kernel of all religions.

The same writer (Mme. Blavatsky) also says the following:

There is but one Eternal Truth, one universal, infinite and changeless spirit of Love, Truth and Wisdom; impersonal, therefore bearing a different name in every nation; one light for all, in which the whole Humanity lives and moves, and has its being. Like the spectrum in optics giving multicolored and various rays, which are yet caused by one and the same sun, so theologized and sacerdotal systems are many. But the universal religion can only be one if we accept the real primitive meaning of the root of the word. We Theosophists so accept it; and therefore say we are all brothers — by the laws of nature, of birth, of death, as also by the laws of our utter helplessness from birth to death in this world of sorrow and deceptive illusions. Let us then love, help and mutually defend each other against the spirit of deception; and while holding to that which each of us accepts as his ideal of truth and unity — i. e. to the religion which suits each of us best — let us unite to form a practical nucleus of a Universal Brotherhood of Humanity without distinction of race, creed or color.

In entire harmony with this is the following declaration in the Constitution of the Universal Brotherhood and Theosophical Society:

Every member has the right to believe or disbelieve in any religious system or philosophy, each being required to show that tolerance for the opinions of others which he expects for his own.

This declaration, however, does not concede or give the right to any member to proselytize for any church or religious system, or to advocate the support of any church or creed — thereby tacitly, if not openly, condemning all other churches and creeds. For this would be a violation of the principles of Theosophy and tend to create dissension.

Having found the inner meaning, having reached "the common ground of all religions" which is "no other than Theosophy," having found the spirit which giveth life, no one, no Theosophist, if he is faithful to himself, to the Higher Self within, can ever again go back to the letter which killeth, or the dogmas which separate. Having found "the living kernel of all religions," the bond of union between Christian, Hindû, Buddhist, Parsi, and men of all professions of faith, he will henceforth be a devotee of Truth alone. He can no longer call himself Christian or Buddhist, or by the name of any other separated religious faith. He will not and cannot subordinate Truth to a half-truth or a partial expression of Truth. It will henceforth be Truth and Light he will ever seek and follow; it will be Truth and Light he will teach and advocate. He will not advocate the support of any church or any creed, but only Truth, Divine Wisdom — Theosophy.

Religion, considered fundamentally, unites; religions, churches, creeds, separate. Looking back through all known history, what is the record of the wars, hatreds and strife between nations and individuals? Have not the bitterest of these and of all human dissensions been due to differences in religion, differences in creed and dogma, sectarianism?

The principal purpose and aim of the Theosophical Society since its foundation by H. P. Blavatsky in New York in 1875, and still more strongly insisted upon since its reorganization by Katherine Tingley, in 1898, as the Universal Brotherhood and Theosophical Society, has been and is to accentuate the fundamental principle of Theosophy, viz., Universal Brotherhood. Harmony based on those foundation truths which are the very essence of Theosophy; the basic truths common to all religions; to seek for the common ground; not to accentuate any creed, any dogma, not to support any Church or any religion, even the greatest, but to support RELIGION, Truth,— these alone can make men free. "There is no Religion higher than Truth," is its motto.

To come now to the application of the foregoing, and the reason for making this statement, the following has been brought to our attention. It is a statement published in the official organ in the U. S. A. of a society which claims to be 'Theosophical,' the same being a section of a society of which Mrs. Annie Besant, a professed 'Theosophist,' is President. The statement in question which quotes authoritatively from Mrs. Besant, is as follows:

Our President has not left us in doubt as to the activities to which we should devote our every available energy in the immediate future; we have not been left groping to find those excellent things for ourselves. In the Watch-tower for November 1916 she has with directness and force informed us that it is a matter of very great importance that we shall do what we can (1) to strengthen the work of Co-Masonry; (2) to help in the establishment of that intellectually inclined, old, but yet very small church, known as the Old Catholic Church, among Theosophists, and (3) to aid in giving out the educational ideas for the future race. She has made it as clear as daylight that we are to take the light of Theosophy into the outer world, entering the four great departments of life which so much need the illumination of our teaching at this critical time: these are politics, religion, education, and social reform.

The language is unequivocal: Mrs. Besant has "with directness and force informed us" (the members of the so-called 'Theosophical' society of which she is president) "that it is a matter of very great importance that we shall do what we can" (italics mine — J.H.F.) . . . "(2) to help in the establishment of . . . the Old Catholic Church . . ." That is, that these people who call themselves 'Theosophists' shall do what they can to help in the establishment of a sect; that they shall desert, if indeed they ever held to it, unsectarianism, and become sectarian. No clearer evidence, surely, is needed to demonstrate the fact that Mrs. Besant by advocating such action, and those who, acting on her instructions, take such action, are not Theosophists, and have no right nor title to the name 'Theosophist.'*

Against this misuse of the name 'Theosophist' and against the misinterpretation and travesty of Theosophy which such action taken in the name of Theosophy implies, every true Theosophist protests.

For the sake of those of the public who may have been misinformed or do not know the facts, it should be stated that neither Mrs. Besant, nor any of her followers, nor, again, any of the members of the so-called Theosophical society of which she is president, is a member of, or affiliated with, the original Theosophical Society founded by H. P. Blavatsky which is now known as the Universal Brotherhood and Theosophical Society, of which Katherine Tingley is the Leader and Official Head, with International Headquarters at Point Loma, California.

But there is still another reason for making this present statement and for emphasizing the fact that neither Mrs. Besant nor any of her followers is a member of, or associated with, or endorsed by, the Universal Brotherhood and Theosophical Society, which reason is to be found in Mrs. Besant's advocacy of 'Co-Masonry' and her urging her followers to actively participate in politics.

As for 'Co-Masonry,' such advocacy may impose upon some of the public who are unacquainted with the principles of Freemasonry which govern the Masonic Fraternity. It is sufficient here to state that to all members of the Masonic Fraternity and to all who know the meaning and purpose of Freemasonry, such advocacy is ridiculous. It is as ridiculous as the attempt of a woman to masquerade as a man, or vice versa. It can never be more than masquerading. Every Freemason who is one really and not merely in name, knows this. More need not be said here.

In regard to politics, the same general argument applies as in regard to religious dogmas, church creeds, etc., as given above. For the sake of the public, however, it should be said that as the Theosophical Society is unsectarian and does not therefore give support to any church, sect, or creed; so also is it non-political and cannot therefore support any political party or movement, or take part, as a Society or through its members, in politics. For, as churches, sects, and creeds divide and provoke dissension, so do

*This statement is not in any sense a criticism of the Old Catholic Church or its teachings, nor would that church be named here had it not been named by Mrs. Besant. The Theosophical Society attacks no church, no man's religion; but neither does it advocate any religion, but seeks only for the Truth underlying all.

politics divide and provoke dissension and stir up strife; and are thus incompatible with the basic teaching of Theosophy, viz.: Universal Brotherhood. The position of the Theosophical Society in regard to politics is clearly stated by H. P. Blavatsky in her work, The Key to Theosophy, in these words:

Do you take any part in politics?

As a Society we carefully avoid them, for the reasons given below. To seek to achieve political reforms before we have effected a reform in human nature, is like putting new wine into old bottles. Make men feel and recognise in their innermost hearts what is their real, true duty to all men, and every old abuse of power, every iniquitous law in the national policy based on human, social or political selfishness, will disappear of itself. Foolish is the gardener who tries to weed his flower-bed of poisonous plants by cutting them out from the surface of the soil, instead of tearing them out by the roots. No lasting political reform can be ever achieved with the same selfish men at the head of affairs as of old.

The Theosophical Society is not, then, a political organization?

Certainly not. It is international in the highest sense, in that its members comprise men and women of all races, creeds, and forms of thought, who work together for one object — the improvement of humanity; but as a society it takes absolutely no part in any national or party politics.

Why is this?

For the very reasons I have mentioned. Moreover, political action must necessarily vary with the circumstances of the time and with the idiosyncrasies of individuals. While, from the very nature of their position as Theosophists, the members of the Theosophical Society are agreed on the principles of Theosophy, or they would not belong to the Society at all, it does not thereby follow that they agree on every other subject. As a society they can only act together in matters which are common to all — that is, in Theosophy itself; as individuals, each is left perfectly free to follow out his or her particular line of political thought and action, so long as this does not conflict with Theosophical principles or hurt the Theosophical Society.

The logic of this position is so clear that it is difficult to understand the state of mind of one, professing to be a Theosophist, who knowingly departs from it. In such case one can only conclude that there has been no real understanding of Theosophy.

Wide publicity has recently been given in the daily press to the recent action of the British Government in India in placing restrictions upon Mrs. Annie Besant, on account of her political activities. An Associated Press Dispatch, also widely published, reports that in the House of Commons, July 11th, the following statement was made by Mr. Austin Chamberlain, Secretary for India:

The Madras Government had offered to relax its prohibition of Mrs. Annie Besant, head of the Theosophical Society, so far as it affected her Theosophical and religious activities, but that Mrs. Besant declined the concession on the ground that it was impossible to separate her Theosophical and political work —*

*When just about to go to press, information was received through the publication of an Associated Press Dispatch dated Bombay, India, Sept. 17th, that Mrs. Besant and two of her associates "have been released from internment by the Madras Government. They had been held for political agitation." The Press Dispatch further states as follows: "It was recently announced that the Indian government was prepared to recommend to the Madras government that the restrictions placed on these people be removed if the government were satisfied they would refrain from unconstitutional and violent methods and political agitation for the remainder of the war."

Compare Mrs. Besant's statement with that made by Mme. Blavatsky, which we again quote.

To seek to achieve political reforms before we have effected a reform in human nature, is like putting new wine into old bottles. Make men feel and recognise in their innermost hearts what is their real, true duty to all men, and every old abuse of power, every iniquitous law in the national policy based on human, social or political selfishness, will disappear of itself.

This is the crux of the whole matter. The work of Theosophy and of all true Theosophists is basic. Any attempt to mix politics with Theosophy, or to use Theosophy or the Theosophical Society to further political ends or in support of any political movement, would be to desert this basic position; seeing that such action and such support would necessarily accentuate the differences and antagonisms between men and parties instead of fostering the basic principles of Universal Brotherhood by which men can unite to act in harmony for the good of all. Just as the accentuation of religious dogmas and creeds is a cause of separation, antagonism, and dissension, so too the accentuation of political opinions and the support of one political party as against another, are likewise fruitful sources of separation, dissension, and antagonism. Hence no Theosophist, if he is seeking truly to fashion his life on the principles of Theosophy, and certainly no Theosophical Teacher, will attempt to mix politics with Theosophy, for this would be a direct violation of the principles of Theosophy, and could not be regarded otherwise than as showing an utter disregard for those principles and for the main object and purpose of the Theosophical Society, and as a failure to apply those principles in the affairs of daily life.

The only alternative conclusion, if the above be not held as applicable, is that Mrs. Besant has totally failed to understand the principles and teachings of Theosophy, and the first object of the Theosophical Society. It should be said that Mrs. Besant ceased to be a member of the original Theosophical Society, being removed from its ranks by a majority vote of ninety-three per cent. of its members, as far back as the year 1895, and at no time since having been recognised by the members of that society as an exponent of Theosophy.

In conclusion, the original Theosophical Society, now known as THE UNIVERSAL BROTHERHOOD AND THEOSOPHICAL SOCIETY, ever has been and is fundamentally and irrevocably unsectarian and non-political. And while Theosophists, "as individuals," as stated above by Mme. Blavatsky, are "perfectly free to follow out his or her particular line of political thought and action," and as stated in the Constitution to "believe or disbelieve in any religious system or philosophy," it must be distinctly understood, as she further says, that this is so only "so long as this does not conflict with Theosophical principles or hurt the Theosophical Society," that is, only so long as it does not provoke dissension and cause antagonism. Official sanction or advocacy of any political movement or party or activity, or of any church, religious dogma, or creed, would be a direct violation of the principles of Theosophy and of the first object of the Theosophical Society. Founded as it is upon Theosophy, and holding to the principles of Theosophy, the Theosophical Society cannot be otherwise than fundamentally and irrevocably unsectarian and non-political, so long as it is true to its declared objects and purposes. And the history and work of the original Theosophical Society, under the guidance of its three Teachers, Helena P. Blavatsky, William Q. Judge, and Katherine Tingley, have demonstrated that it has remained true to those teachings and principles. Furthermore, any society that deviates from those principles and teachings cannot be a Theosophical Society in the true meaning of that term; for Theosophy is more than a teaching or a mode of thought; it is a life, true living, right action. It is Theosophy that the true Theosophist will uphold, it is Theosophy he will seek to make the rule and guide of his life, for as H. P. Blavatsky said, "Theosophist is, who Theosophy does."

All lovers of justice should find this interesting:—

RETRACTION BY 'THE NEW YORK WORLD'

THE two documents which are given below require little introduction, because they tell their own story.

On May 27th, 1916, I demanded from The New York World a retraction of certain libelous statements embodied in an article published by it on March 19th, 1916, the alternative being the filing by me of a suit at law for libel against this paper.

The World expressed a readiness to correct its mistake by a published retraction, which duly appeared in its pages on July 9th, under the heading 'The Truth about Katherine Tingley.' This retraction is the second of the reprints which follow.

To the Owners, Editors and Publishers of
The New York World, New York City

The article published on pages 5 and 17 of The New York World Magazine of March 19th, 1916, entitled 'Purple Mother of Point Loma,' is based on falsehoods, distorted truths and facts which, in the context and form in which they are published, produce entirely false impressions. I am convinced that it is a libel. It has already caused and will continue inevitably to cause me, both in my private and my official capacity, extensive and irreparable injury.

In view of the nature of the defamation and of its being published in connexion with the litigation over the Spalding estate, thereby unwarrantably connecting me with that litigation, I am led to infer that either the writer was animated by a malicious intent or was the mere mouthpiece of others who are interested in breaking the will of the late A. G. Spalding, who left the bulk of his estate to his wife, and not one cent to myself or the institution which I represent.

It is not only an injury to me living, but will dishonor my memory and blight the continuance of my educational and humanitarian work after I am gone. Moreover, it is a serious reflexion upon the intelligence, motives and credit of the members of the Universal Brotherhood and Theosophical Society, of which I am the Leader and Official Head — members located at the International Theosophical Headquarters here at Point Loma, members throughout America, and members in foreign countries.

It is a most defamatory attack upon my private life and upon my public work. It holds me up to public hatred, contempt and ridicule. It charges me with dishonest, immoral, and even criminal conduct. The lawyers to whom I have referred the article in question unhesitatingly and entirely coincide with my views as expressed above.

Before instructing my lawyers to bring action for damages for the publication of the article, I am disposed to give you an opportunity to counteract as far as possible the injury you have done me, by making a full retraction of such a nature as the circumstances of the publication require.

With this purpose in view I send this telegram, to ask you to notify my attorney in this case, Jaspersen Smith, of the firm of Montgomery, Hart, Smith, and Steere, The Rookery, Chicago, Illinois, by wire, if you are ready to consider the publication of such a retraction as I will prepare and mail to you within a few days from the receipt of your answer.

All I ask from you is justice.

THE TRUTH ABOUT KATHERINE TINGLEY

A Statement of Facts Published in Justice to the Universal Brotherhood and Theosophical Society and to its Leader and Official Head

IN the Sunday Magazine section of 'The World' for March 19th, 1916, there appeared a full-page illustrated article by Edward H. Smith, under the heading: 'THE PURPLE MOTHER OF POINT LOMA.'

The article purported to deal with the life of Katherine Tingley, Leader and Official Head of the Universal Brotherhood and Theosophical Society, which has its International Headquarters at Point Loma, California. It also commented on Madame Tingley's connexion with the contest of the will of the late A. G. Spalding.

The article was widely circulated and was reproduced in whole or in part by other newspapers in North and South America. It has given serious offense to Madame Tingley, her friends, and the members of the Theosophical Society. They have complained and asked for a correction. The World's Bureau of Accuracy and Fair Play has taken up these complaints, and after an inquiry has found that the article was defamatory, inaccurate and misleading in many of its statements, and that it did Madame Tingley and her associates at Point Loma an injustice. It is with a view to correcting the injustice that this publication is made.

THE immediate cause of the publication complained of was the filing by the son and adopted son of the late Albert G. Spalding, the 'Father of American Baseball,' of a suit to contest Mr. Spalding's will, which left $100,000 to each of the contestants, a similar amount to Mr. Spalding's stepson, and the remainder of the estate to his widow, Mrs. A. G. Spalding, who resides at Point Loma, California, and is a member of the Theosophical Society. Several contests and amended contests were filed, the legal verbiage and character of which apparently misled the writer in his phrasing of certain portions of The World's publication. The statements of contestants were objected to by the attorneys for Mrs. A. G. Spalding and amended statements of contest were substituted, charging in a less offensive form that Mr. Spalding was of unsound mind when he made his will, and that the will was the result of a conspiracy between Mme. Tingley, Mrs. A. G. Spalding and the stepson. These charges have been denied, and the case is awaiting trial.

Meantime, Mme. Tingley has filed suit in the courts of San Diego, California, for $250,000 damages against Keith Spalding, one of the contestants, against his wife, and J. W. Spalding and H. B. Spalding, respectively brother and nephew of the late A. G. Spalding. Mme. Tingley alleges in the complaint that a conspiracy exists to defame her and to injure the educational and humanitarian work which she is directing.

Several of the statements made in the magazine article were the subject of inquiry in a libel suit brought in 1901 by Mme. Tingley against a prominent Los Angeles newspaper. In this suit a verdict for a substantial amount in favor of Mme. Tingley was awarded by the jury, and the Supreme Court of California sustained the award after overruling several hundred objections.

Other incorrect statements in the article concerned the Patterson will case, filed in 1910 to contest a will in which Mme. Tingley was one of the beneficiaries. It was alleged that Mrs. Patterson-Thurston was of unsound mind, and that Mme. Tingley had unduly influenced the making of the will. The court on motion for a new trial held that Mrs. Patterson-Thurston had not the necessary mental capacity to make a will, but that there was no evidence to sustain the charges against Mme. Tingley. The court therefore set aside the verdict of the jury on the latter point, and pending an appeal a compromise resulted between the contesting relatives and Mme. Tingley.

The World's inquiry shows that certain of the statements in the magazine article were taken from previous newspaper publications regarding Mme.

Tingley and the Theosophical Society which have been repeated at intervals for several years past. These statements were circulated by Alexander Fullerton, who was once the secretary of the American section of a Theosophical society not connected with or endorsed by Mme. Tingley or the Universal Brotherhood and Theosophical Society. Fullerton was arrested February 18th, 1910, by Anthony Comstock on a Federal warrant charging him with sending obscene matter through the mails. On February 24th, 1910, he was committed as insane upon the order of Justice Platzek of the New York Supreme Court and the Federal prosecution was dropped.*

In 1902, when certain charges and objections were made to Mme. Tingley's receiving a number of Cuban children in the Point Loma school, the Federal Bureau of Immigration at Washington sent the Commissioner-General of Immigration to undertake a personal investigation, and he filed a report highly commendatory of the school.

The International Headquarters of the Universal Brotherhood and Theosophical Society, including the Râja-Yoga College and School, are visited year in and year out by numbers of prominent American and European teachers, jurists, artists, musicians and social service workers. The public is permitted to visit the grounds and the buildings from ten to four o'clock each day and to become familiar with the Theosophical activities. The permanent residents on the Point Loma grounds number well-known teachers, artists, musicians and others, all of several nationalities, giving to the place an air of cosmopolitan culture. The open-air Greek Theater, situated on the edge of the cliffs overlooking the Pacific Ocean, was built by Katherine Tingley, and was the first of its kind in the United States, and here have been presented many of the great Greek tragedies and several of the plays of Shakespeare.

*To enable the reader to understand this paragraph more clearly it should be stated that Alexander Fullerton had two objects in view in circulating the statements referred to:

(1) To prejudice the public as well as the members of the Universal Brotherhood and Theosophical Society against Madame Tingley, so that she would be forced to resign, thus giving to Alexander Fullerton the opportunity of inviting the members of the Universal Brotherhood and Theosophical Society to join Mrs. Besant's so-called Theosophical society, of which he was General Secretary in America.

(2) Knowing that Madame Tingley had evidence regarding his immoral and perverted conduct with boys — and knowing too of her rescue work among boys and girls and the unfortunate generally — he sought to blacken her character and reputation, so that in case she should expose him she would be discredited in the eyes of the public.

No one but an insane man would have dared to publish and circulate such maliciously false and defamatory statements — so scandalous that he dared not have them printed or sent through the mail! — which in typewritten form were passed surreptitiously from hand to hand. And yet Alexander Fullerton retained for many years afterwards his position as the chief officer of Mrs. Besant's society in the U. S. A., and in her magazine The Theosophist, March 1910 (he was arrested in February 1910), Mrs. Besant published a eulogy of him, over her own initials, speaking of him as a 'Theosophical Worthy'!

PRESERVING POINT LOMA FROM THE MYTH-MONGERS

FROM THE SAN DIEGO 'UNION,' SUNDAY, JULY 30TH, 1916:

EXTRACTS FROM 'ON THE MARGIN,' BY 'YORICK'

WHAT is a legend? How are myths invented and propagated? From what circumstances of superstition and ignorance do false religions emanate? Wherein were the heroes and saints of tradition different from their fellow-citizens and neighbors? I was amusing myself the other day with these speculations, when I suddenly realized that I did not have to search the recondite and occult black-letter tomes of medievalism for an answer to my questions. I recalled that within the corporate jurisdiction of San Diego two conspicuous examples of myth and fable are in the making. One of these is the legend of Ramona, for which there is not the slightest foundation except the romance of Helen Hunt Jackson, and the other is the popular superstition that clusters and grows constantly about the International Theosophical Headquarters at Point Loma, of which Katherine Tingley is the head and the guiding spirit. The difference between these San Diego myths is in the fact that Ramona never existed; whereas Madame Tingley is very much alive, as some of those most active in propagating the popular fables concerning her work and institution have found, to their sorrow and cost — the cost involving much of the sorrow.

CLASSIC PRECEDENT FOR LEGEND-MAKING

I suspect that much of the legend growing in the gardens of Point Loma is fostered by local prejudice against a philosophy which the legend-makers do not understand, but which they fear is an insidious assault upon their own cherished faiths and beliefs. What men do not understand they condemn, and what they fear they persecute.

Only the other day, for the most recent example, it was necessary for Madame Tingley to offer proof against the New York World that it had libeled her and the organization of which she is the leader, in a full-page illustrated article written by one Edward H. Smith and published in the World's Sunday Magazine section under the heading, 'The Purple Mother of Point Loma.' In her communication to the owners, editors and publishers of the World Madame Tingley characterized the article as "a most defamatory attack upon my private life and upon my public work" . . . holding her up to "public hatred, contempt and ridicule" . . . charging her with "dishonest, immoral, and even criminal conduct," and closing with the significant statement that, "Before instructing my lawyers to bring action for damages for the publication of the article, I am disposed to give you an opportunity to counteract as far as possible the injury you have done me, by making a full retraction of such a nature as the circumstances of the publication require."

A RETRACTION UNDER STRESS

After a consultation with their own lawyers, the editors and publishers of the World printed this retraction:

[Here follows the World's statement as to the Retraction.]

THEY ARE GROWING ALL AROUND US

A very handsome apology, to be sure! but what a pity that the World's 'Bureau of Accuracy and Fair Play' didn't perform its functions before the publication of the "defamatory, inaccurate and misleading" article. The incident, of course, is now closed as far as it concerns Madame Tingley and the New York World; but I fear that the credulous, prejudiced, romance-loving, myth-making multitude will go right along inventing and believing absurd and grotesque tales of what is doing at Point Loma — an institution as open to the light of day as its beautiful Greek Theater down in the canyon that looks to the sunset as

"The mountains look on Marathon,
And Marathon looks on the sea."

So you will understand why it is unnecessary for me to delve in ancient lore or to search through the pages of Max Müller to learn the secret of legendary origins and mythical sources. The greenest grass grows at our own door.

OBJECTS

This BROTHERHOOD is part of a great and universal movement which has been active in all ages.

This Organization declares that Brotherhood is a fact in Nature. Its principal purpose is to teach Brotherhood, demonstrate that it is a fact in Nature and make it a living power in the life of humanity.

Its subsidiary purpose is to study ancient and modern religions, science, philosophy and art; to investigate the laws of nature and the divine powers in man.

* * *

THE UNIVERSAL BROTHERHOOD AND THEOSOPHICAL SOCIETY welcomes to membership all who truly love their fellow-men and desire the eradication of the evils caused by the barriers of race, creed, caste, or color, which have so long impeded human progress. To all sincere lovers of truth, and to all who aspire to higher and better things than the mere pleasures and interests of a worldly life, and are prepared to do all in their power to make Theosophy a living energy in the life of humanity, its various departments offer unlimited opportunities.

The whole work of the Organization is under the direction of the Leader and Official Head, Katherine Tingley, as outlined in the Constitution.
